WAS FIRST LINER DE LUXE.

Kaiser Wilhelm der Grosse Suits Cost $1,000—Later Prices Reached $5,000.

The Kaiser Wilhelm der Grosse, which at the outbreak of war was converted into an armed cruiser and which was sunk off the west coast of Africa by the British cruiser High Flyer, was built in 1897 at a cost of between $3,000,000 and $4,000,000. She was 626 feet long, 96 feet beam and 14,350 gross tonnage. She had an average speed of twenty-three knots and, according to the Naval Annual, she was fitted to carry an armament of eight 5.9 guns, four 4.7 guns and fourteen machine guns.

The liner was the first vessel to have suits de luxe, consisting of parlor, bedroom and bath, costing $1,000 for the passage. The innovation proved a great success, and the succeeding liners ran the price up to $2,000 and continued after that until the limit was reached with the $5,000 Imperial suits on the Vaterland and the Imperator.

Watchful Waiting.

Refugees arriving from Ostend by way of Folkestone told of one of their number, a corpulent Frenchman, who, as soon as the boat left the wharf at Ostend, took off his coat, vest and boots and, putting on a life preserver, sat down on the edge of the deck, continuing the whole trip in this costume. Asked what he meant by such behavior, he replied in just one eloquent word: "Mines!"

A Wonderful Drummer.

Probably the most remarkable drummer who ever lived was Jean Henri, the famous tambour-major of the Emperor Napoleon. One of his feats was to play on fifteen different toned drums at the same time in a soft and harmonious manner that instead of the deafening uproar that might have been expected the effect was that of a novel and complete instrument. In playing he passed from one drum to the other with such wonderful quickness that the eyes of the spectators could hardly follow the movement of his hands and body.

Mansfield's Humor.

Richard Mansfield's humor was often misapprehended for conceit.

One night the company was playing under a tin roof upon which a sudden downpour of rain caused a terrific clatter. This startled Mansfield into exclaiming, "What's that noise?" "Rain, sir," was the answer. "Tell it to stop!" ordered the actor fiercely.—New York Globe.

She Was Prepared.

"I trust, Miss Tappit," said the benevolent employer to his stenographer, "that you have something in reserve for a rainy day."

"Yes, sir," said the earnest young woman. "I am going to marry a man named Mackintosh."

Perfectly Plausible.

Cautious Customer—But if he's a young horse, why do his legs bend so? Dealer—Ah, sir, the poor animal has been living in a stable too low for him, and he's had to stoop—Exchange.

Pa's Solution.

"Oh, papa," called Willie excitedly, "there's a big black bug on the ceiling." "All right, son," said the professor, busy with his essay; "step on it and don't bother me."

BETTER SITUATION IN REPUBLIC OF MEXICO

Peace Once More Settles Over the Country.

Washington, Aug. 31.—Security throughout Mexico is the optimistic estimate of the situation in the republic expressed in a statement made public by the Constitutionalist agency in Washington. Even Emiliano Zapata, the invincible and irreconcilable leader of the rebel forces of southwestern Mexico, has come into the fold.

The satisfactory settlement of the feud in Sonora between the followers of Governor Maytorena and Colonel Calles removes the possibility of this altercation growing into a revolt against the central government. Peace is now virtually established throughout the entire country.

A message from Mexico City did not give any details of the agreement reached between Zapata and Carranza except that the former had pledged himself to recognize the new government. It is known that Zapata has been fighting for years to obtain agrarian reforms, and it is thought that when he was convinced that Carranza was honestly determined to bring the same reforms to the people that he agreed readily to co-operate with him. Zapata was in sympathy with Madero on this score, but reactionary influences succeeded in separating the two men.

So Memory Reminds Us.

The little boy had been whipped as far back as he could remember.—New York Sun. That, we believe, is the customary place.—London Opinion.

Rev. Mr. Bates Writes.

It has been some time since I made an effort to call up the memories of the past for your readers.

The death of Mrs. Mary Noell, my aunt, will furnish an excuse for me to claim a little of your valuable space. Solomon might have meant her, when he said, "Many daughters have done virtuously, but thou excellest them all." I can not remember when she came into our family, and I am sure there was no one in all the connection who was more highly respected, or loved more truly by all the relatives, than she was. She had never been favored with good health. She was almost blind for years, and had severe illness almost every year of her life. She was a true mother to her husband's children, and as devoted a wife as was ever known.

In all my wanderings of these many years, there were always two homes at Cloverport open to me at any time, Willis Noell's and John Keith's. Now the angel of death has visited them both.

When we name over the families that you and I knew in Cloverport, when we were young, we see how many changes time can bring. The last Murray has now moved away, the name LaHeist has not been there for a good while. It has been years since the name of Webb or Vest has been heard on your streets. The Pierces are gone, the Duncans are gone, except Henry's family, Miller and Hovious are gone. Bates has not been a name in your town for a number of years. You will think of others that are gone or are fast disappearing. Some of these names are still heard among the colored people, but not among the whites.

Many good people have come and gone, but you have had none better than Aunt Mary. I trust you will all be kind to the dear uncle during his few remaining days. On my last two or three visits, when we retired at night, my aunt would say, "Now Sammie, read and pray with us. We may never meet again in this world." I wish that we might all be as well prepared for that long journey as she was. Her life ought to leave a benediction on Cloverport. Sincerely yours,

S. C. BATES.

Correction.

Dear Mr. Babbage:—Please correct mistake in last weeks paper, where you have second premium on boar under six months old, Thos Kennedy instead of John Kennedy, and also on sow one year old you have it first premium J. P. Kennedy, instead of John Kennedy, and you have it on best sow six months old first premium J. P. Kennedy instead of John Kennedy. You also have it wrong on second day, on best two pigs same size any age, you have J. P. Kennedy instead of John Kennedy. You also left out Mrs. John Kennedy's reward on her chickens.
